London based Kristin Hjellegjerde is delighted to announce its new gallery space in Berlin, located on Linienstraße 130 in Mitte. The gallery will open with a two-artist exhibition on the 26th of April 2018 and will also mark the Gallery's 6th year anniversary.

Coinciding with Berlin Gallery Weekend the inaugural exhibition will present paintings by Norwegian Martine Poppe and video sculptures by British James Alec Hardy.

"I have been working towards opening a second place for over two years" says founder Kristin Hjellegjerde. "Berlin felt like a natural extension of our main space in London, reflecting the diversity and international activities of our artists and collectors alike. I am thrilled to begin promoting our artists in this exciting new environment, as well as to access and discover emerging and established talent in Berlin, which is such a thriving, cutting-edge arts destination in itself."

Eva Maria Ostendorf, Berlin's new gallery director adds: "Kristin Hjellegjerde Berlin will continue its ethos of showcasing art in an intimate setting, providing a new platform for its current artists as well as taking on new talents. With our international and versatile setup we hope to add a unique element to Berlin's vibrant gallery scene".
